

UI designer

Are you passionate about UI and design? Do you know how to create a wow in the digital field and don't work with limitations? Then you might be our new graphic/UI designer

At Livehouse we are looking for a "kick ass" graphic/UI designer who can take our designs and universe to a new level. Your passion is to create creative and user-friendly customer experiences and you know how to create a wow. Your homefield is within motion design and you know how important quality is. Both for our customers as well as our own brand

The position

As our new UI-designer, you will be responsible for combining user needs and customer wishes to one state of the art design experience. You will play a central role in our design process, and you will be working closely with our back-end developers and other stakeholders across the company as well as our customers. The most important thing is that you have a creative side well founded in the technical understanding of the graphic programs you are working in. You are flexible and like working with many different stakeholders in the creative process and you know the importance of involving users and stakeholders to reach the greatest result.

Your primary work:

- Creating motion design experiences for our own brand and customers
- Creating state of the art customer universes based on their brand identity and wishes.
- Creating microsites
- Being sparring partner and help developing Livehouse.com
- Work on internal branding projects
- Work on new internal concepts

We expect from you:

- You have a high technical graphic understanding of programs (Adobe package, after affects or similar motion programs) and designs
- You are very creative and can create designs at a high quality
- You easily adjust to customers thoughts and wishes and know how to convert that into state of the art design solutions
- You have an extensive toolbox within the graphic field – incl after affects or similar
- You have a can do attitude and will always walk the extra mile to make things happen

- You are a team player who thrives in a dynamic environment, and you get energy from sparing with your colleagues

We offer

- You have the option to become part of a company in huge expansion where you easily can influence on your daily work.
- A good workplace and environment with nice colleagues. You will be part of a great young design team
- An environment with different cultures and a safe place to share knowledge and experiences
- Good development opportunities
